

Dear colleagues,

I hope your academic year is starting well. We're writing today as members of Marquette's Participating Faculty Committee to update you on our work to improve the lived experience of participating faculty.

The Participating Faculty Committee addresses issues of importance to members of the Marquette participating faculty.

Apply for participating faculty awards

The Office of the Provost is currently accepting applications for participating (non-tenure track) professional development awards and research awards (both due Oct. 4). The Committee on Research is currently accepting applications for the Participating Faculty Research Achievement Award (due Nov. 26). More information and application details for all participating faculty awards are online.

Register for second annual Marquette Participating Faculty Symposium, Nov. 25-26

The Center for Teaching and Learning will host the second annual Marquette Participating Faculty Symposium on Monday, Nov. 25, and Tuesday, Nov. 26, in Raynor Memorial Library's Beaumier Suites. All faculty, staff and graduate students are encouraged to attend. This year's Participating Faculty Symposium focuses on the theme of collaboration — collaboration in teaching, to support student success, in faculty research and in leadership positions on campus. This symposium shines a light on participating full-time, part-time and adjunct non-tenure track faculty as educators, scholars and leaders at Marquette. Learn more and register

Please join Acting President and Provost Ah Yun and members of the Participating Faculty Committee for a Participating Faculty Social Hour on Wednesday, Oct. 30, from 4 p.m. to 5:15 p.m.
